WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

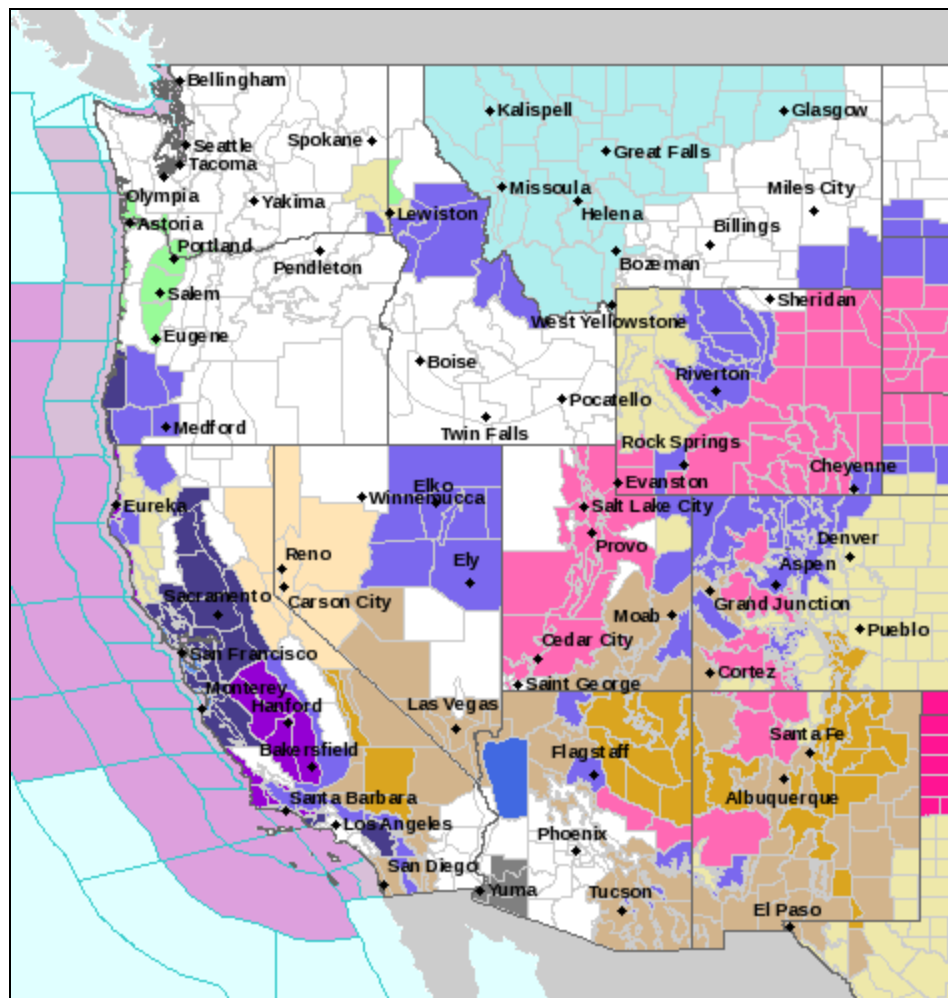

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

A cold weather system will bring scattered snow showers across the northern Sierra today. Near record cold temperatures with a possible widespread freeze early this week. Unsettled pattern continues through the week. Latest radar and satellite imagery indicates the next wave of energy coming down on the backside of an upper level trough.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Light rain and mountain snow will fall across much of the region today with snow falling as low as 1500 feet this morning. Gusty winds and a blast of cold air will create very cold wind chill temperatures through today with frost or freezing conditions Tuesday and Wednesday mornings. Conditions will be dry but cool for the remainder of the week.
